問題 V 次の文章について設問に答えよ。解答番号は ~

Children can spend hours a day looking at computer screens and other digital devices. Some eye-care professionals say all that screen time has led to an increase in what they call computer vision syndrome¹.

Nathan Warford, an eye doctor in Tampa, Florida, says he has seen an increase in problems in children. “I see a lot more children who are coming into the office because their parents have noticed that they have headaches or red or watery eyes or discomfort, or because their near-sightedness to be increasing at a fast rate and they’re worried.”

Dr. Warford says part of the problem is that children may be more likely than adults to ignore early warning signs. “Even if their eyes start to feel uncomfortable or they start to get a headache, they’re less likely to tell their parents, because they don’t want to have the game or the PC taken away.”

He says another part of the problem is that people blink² less often when they use digital devices. “The average person who uses a computer or an electronic device blinks about a as much as we normally do in everyday life. And so that can result in the front part of the eye drying and not staying moist³ and protected like normal.”

Eye doctors offer suggestions like following what is known as the 20/20/20 rule. “Every 20 minutes, look away 20 feet or more for at least 20 seconds from device you’re using.”

Other suggestions include keeping more between you and the device and using good lighting. Of course, another way to avoid eye problems is to spend less time looking at screens. Many experts say children should spend no more than two hours a day using digital devices – with no screen time for children under two.
